God's Spirit in Battle.

In these days of spiritual dearth among the churches, the remark is often made that the excitement of the times is so great that religion is supplanted in the mind ; and this is thought a sufficient excuse for the sad fact. But is it? When God is visiting the land and smiting down so many, ought not the thoughts to dwell more upon religious matters; and instead of there being less interest felt in these things, should there not be more? The Rev. Dr. Stiles, in one of his reports as an army Missionary to the Board of Missions of the United Synod relates an incident which shows that the Spirit of God may be present in his power, even in circumstances of the most intense excitement. He remarks, "Sodeep and enduring was the religious spirit awakened by the Fredericksburg revival, that in an artillery company two souls probably made anxious by the zealous piety of a comrade who had enjoyed himself abundan ly at the Fredericksburg meeting, hopefully converted in the very midst of the severest fighting in the late waitle; while others felt, that they were almost in heaven and could hardly suppress their exultant religious shouts amid the loudest roar and din of conflict, the slonghter of the cannoneers of their own gan, and the palpable peril of thir own life,"

Hope in God.

The mistake we make is looking for a source of comfort in ourselves: self contemplation instead of gazing upou God through or in Christ. In other words we look for comfort precisely where comfort never can be. For, first, it is impossible to derive consolation at all times from our own feelings because of ther mutability : to-day we are well, and spiritual expe-rience, partaking of the circumstances, is bright foit tomorrow, some outward circumstances change, the sun does not shine, or the wind is chill, and we are low, gloomy, and sad .--Then if our hopes were unreasonably elevated, they will not be unreason. ably depressed : and so, our experience becomes flux, and reflux, ebb and flow. like the sea, that emblem of instability.

Next, it is impossible to get comfort from our own acts : for though 'are the test of character, yet, in a low state no man can judge of his own acts. They assume a darkness of hue which reflect on them by the eye that contemplates them.

Of a distinguished minister we are told, that during his college course, the seems to have lived cotinnally. in the fear of God, and for the most part in the comfort of the Holy Ghost." The ention of the two was in acordance with the Divine will. It is in the normal, state of the believer .----The scriptures represent the first Christians as walking in both : and that is the privilege-nay, the duty-of all who would follow in their steps He who keeps the fear of God truly alive in his bosom, will not be suffered to come short of the comfort of the Holy Ghost. Looking and pressing upward, he will be lifted to the higher sphere of experience. On the other hand, he who contents himself without the comfort of the Holy Ghost, will gradually lose the fear of God. Looking and leaning downward, his experience will sink beneath even this lower spere. That is to say, he who serves will find his faithful purpose ripening into the boye of service, and her who contemns or trifles with and lorgs the joy of ser-vice will find his carnal negligence waxing worse and worse until he serves no longer. Let us examine our career as Chris-tians in the light of these truths.-Have we come to regard the comfort of the Hosy Ghost as beyond our reach And may not this be the reason why the fear of God maintains'its holds upon as? only by the force of constant struggles against the evil of our nature? ## No Dispondency.

The Richmond Di patch revives the well known anecdote of Paul. Jones. We copy it. Every man with blood in his veins can make the application. Upon others, excam les as well as precept are 'thrown away:

While Paul Jones, in the wretched old bulk of mr Indiaman as hundered years old, (the Ban Hom ne Richard.) was engaged in his desperate conflict with the Scrapis, a new English frigate of the first class, just out of port-after a single broadside had riddled her so, completely that he was compelled to lash her to the Englishman to avoid sinking-when near ly all his guns had bursted, and half his crew had fallen-a momentary cessation of firing induced his adversary to hail him and inquire whether he had struck. "We have not yet be-gun to fight." was the laconic ane pithy reply, and after two hours mord of mortal combat he had the proud satisfaction of walking the Englishman's deck, a victor under circumstances so desperate that at one time there appeared no chance of escape. is the reward of valor when allied to constancy, and directed by an in domitable will.
