THE REFLEX INFLUENCE OF INDIVIDUAL EFFORT FOR THE CONVER-SION OF OTHERS.

Action is the condition of physical development. Exercise develops the muscles, rounds the figure, beautifies the complexion, and gives healthfulness to the whole system. The more we exercise our powers and faculties, intellectual or corporeal, the more are they capable of use.] The same law holds as to spiritual development.

A uniformly receptive attitude, al ways receiving, never imparting, dwarfs the spiritual powers and hinders growth in the divine life. He who cats always and labors never, may be a gormandizer, but cannot be a man. The constant imbibition of truth will tend but little to growth in grace if there be no manifestation of its power in action. The freeness and gladness, which are the rewardof the cheerful and constant giver, are strangers to the mind of him whose covetous and selfish greed of gain excludes him from the blessed reward of Christian beneficence with the mere shell of Christianity.
