Electro-Noise.

(TRADE MARK)

Cures all Diseases Without Medicine.

The readers of the BAPTIST have seen ELECTRO-NOISE advertised in its columns for some time past. Some have paid little or no attention to it, while others have tested its merits, to their great joy and happiness, while others still have had some curiosity to know what it is and what it will do. To these we say, Send us your name and address, or the name of some friend, and we will send a little pamphlet giving full particulars.

Now as briefly as possible we will tell you what the ELECTRO-NOISE is, and refer you to the testimony of good witnesses, whose evidence can not be doubted, as to what it has done, not what we say it will do. The ELECTRO-NOISE is an electro-medical instrument, by the use of which "Oxygen, the most electrical form of matter in nature," is rapidly absorbed through the skin and membranes of the person of the patient. This oxygen gives new strength and vitality. By this treatment any disease can be cured where there is sufficient vitality left to build on. In one neighborhood in Woodlawn, Ala., recently, there were five patients, all between twelve and thirty years of age, taken with typhoid fever; four were attended by physicians, and one, a delicate boy fourteen years old, treated by the ELECTRO-NOISE, was the only one who recovered. Not a drop of medicine was used in this case.

I believe the Electro-Noise is going to cure my heart disease. I am better than I have been in two years. Rev. Dr. J. DEW. BURKHEAD, Montgomery, Ala.

I take pleasure in saying that the Electro-Noise gave me permanent relief from neuralgia of the stomach and bowels, after all other remedies had failed to arrest the disease. Rev. Dr. T. J. BEARD, Birmingham, Ala.

I have used the Electro-Noise and find it a most valuable instrument. I think it benefited me greatly, and all who have used it speak in the highest terms of its powers. Rev. M. B. WHARTON, Montgomery, Ala., July 20, '90.

I do not want to be without an Electro-Noise under any circumstances. Dr. J. M. MASON, Columbus, Ga.

A Morning's Lesson.

"Aunt Barstow, do you know I am half inclined to ask Mr. Mallock if life is worth living?" "Helen Willoughby?" "There, aunt, don't look at me over your glasses in that way, as if I had broken the Ten Commandments in one breath. I mean it. Is life worth living? My life at any rate! What does it amount to? It's the same old story day after day: Calling and receiving calls; going to parties and getting home late; getting up in the morning with a 'wretched headache,' and so going through the same old routine. Truly, I'm sick of it."

"But your music and your painting, dear?" "O, yes, they are all very well in their way, but neither amounts to anything. I shall never be an artist or a musician, and I am tired of them, but—in fact, I am tired of everything! And I have just received a note from our Mission Circle—which I seldom attend, you know—asking for a thank-offering. Ugh! I don't feel very thankful for anything."

Mrs. Barstow worked on in silence for some time upon the small garment she was fashioning; then carefully folding it up, she said rather peremptorily: "Helen, I want you to put on your jacket and hat, and come with me for a short walk."

"O, aunt, not this cold morning! We should surely freeze!" "Stuff and nonsense!" retorted her aunt bluntly. "It will do you good. Come, Helen, I am going to take you to see a young woman, just about your age, who will perhaps show you what to be thankful for, as well as answer your question, 'Is life worth living?' for you."

"O, aunt, some of your poor folks?" "No, child, not some of my poor folks, but one of God's rich folks. In ten minutes I shall be ready."

Helen Willoughby knew her aunt too well to oppose her, so she very reluctantly donned her pretty street suit, wishing all the time she had held her peace about Mr. Mallock, and thank-offerings, and all connected with them if this was the outcome.

They were soon walking briskly down the broad avenue, and the young lady's face did not lose its look of dissatisfaction until after several turns a narrow street was reached, and Mrs. Barstow was ringing at the narrow door of a narrow house, then something like interest or curiosity came into the girl's face, as the bell was answered by a pleasant faced lady, who smiled a welcome to them both as she exclaimed:

"O, Mrs. Barstow, how glad I am to see you! Edwina has been so lonely the past few days. No one has been in and she calls you one of her stars, you know."

"One of her 'stars'?" almost unconsciously asked Helen, just as Mrs. Barstow was making her known as "my niece," to Mrs. Lowe.

"Yes, dear, because she's always so bright. Edwina has a name of her own for everybody and everything. But here we are. Edwina, who do you think has come?"

They had come through a narrow hall and up a short flight of stairs, and were now at the door of a small room, where on the bed lay a young girl whose expectant eyes were turned to ward her approaching visitors.

She held out her arms without a word, and as Mrs. Barstow stepped quickly up to the bedside, she drew her face down to hers and softly kissed each cheek. Then she looked past her at Helen, who was standing at the door, and said:

"Do come in! I'll promise not to bite you. You're Helen, I know—I've heard your aunt so often speak of you. Excuse me for not rising, won't you? The only reason I don't is because I'm afraid there wouldn't be chairs enough for us all."

Helen took the hand held out very near the bright eyes, who seemed running over with life.

"That's right, sit there where I can look at you. It's such a comfort just to have some one to look at; at last few days have been so long."

The sweet face on the pillow grew serious. "My dear," she said, after a little, "it is hard, often, but there is so much blessedness in it that it makes me forget much of the pain and suffering."

"But what 'blessedness' can there be in lying here day after day and year after year?" asked Helen doubtfully.

"O, my dear, so much that I could not begin to tell you all. The many kind friends I have who are more like angels, the tender ministrations I receive from so many which I would not otherwise receive. O, it seems to me that every year I have a little more 'blessedness.' The dear Lord is good to me!" and the tears gathered in her eyes.

"Dear," said Mrs. Barstow, presently, "don't you want to show my niece some of your handiwork, and let her see some of this 'blessedness' of yours?"

"Dear me! I don't call that a part of it," the sick girl laughed; "only so far as it enables me to keep my hands and fingers busy. Mother, dear, will you show my last Afghan?"

Mrs. Lowe left the room for a moment, and returned with a handsome robe knit in bright stripes, which she spread over the bed for the visitor's inspection.

"This is my tenth," said Edwina, passing her hands caressingly over its folds. "Do you know, I almost hate to part with one after it is finished, each part brings to mind so much that I can't stand to let it go. This is the last of a series of Afghans I made during the visit of a dear friend, and all the vestiges of that visit come back to me as I look at it. This shaded stripe is typical of the many days full of light and shade, that I was working on it. The dark stripe I knit when all was silent and still in the house—nights when sleep would not visit my eyelids. How often have I been thankful for work of this kind that I could do in the fringe of a violet in a dish at my bedside were just filling the room with their fragrance. O, how sweet they were! Yes, every stitch, almost, speaks of some pleasure or pain."

"Tell Miss Willoughby whom this is for and about the others," suggested Mrs. Barstow in an undertone.

"O, yes! Well, you know I belong to a 'Shut-In Society,' composed of a thousand or more members (and how often, often have I thanked God for this blessed union of sufferers!) Of course there are many blessings which I have, and I try to send a bit of sunshine into their lives, and comfort as well, by means of an Afghan. This one goes to a poor girl in Maine. O, you do not know how thankful I am every day of my life that I cannot use my feet, I can use my hands. Indeed, I have so much to be thankful for!"

The color came quickly in Helen's face as she caught her aunt's eye just then, and turning hastily to the girl at her side, she said playfully—

"And may I ask it you are in league with some wholesale dealer in yarns and worsteds?"

The sick girl laughed. "Not exactly. Will you believe me if I tell you the Lord sends the wool to me?" "Perhaps so, if you tell me in what manner," answered Helen, not a little awed by her new friend's faith.

"Well, from the very beginning it has seemed as if God has just answered my thoughts and desires before I had put them into the form of prayer. The wools of the first robe were given me by a friend who had bought them for her own use, but who, for some reason or other, decided to give them to me; but since then other friends have interested others in me and my 'hobby,' so that hardly a week goes by without a package of bright wools coming to me. I know it is the dear Father who moves their hearts. A good deal that I receive isn't just suitable for a 'slumber robe,' so I use it in making scarves, caps, and bed socks, which I send to the 'Home for the Friendless' in New York. A friend who came to see me a short time ago was bemoaning her lack of time for charitable work; her children and household cares 'took all the time there was,' as she expressed it, so since then I have been thankful for time."

"But how is it when you are too ill to work?" asked Helen, who, to her aunt's intense satisfaction, was unconsciously doing a good deal of questioning.

"O, then I just lie and think—if the bed doesn't ache too badly to allow of my thinking—how grand it will be by and by to step out of this body into another that will never know an ache or pain, or, as some one has beautifully expressed it, 'into the glad free health of Paradise.' O, my dear," touching Helen's hand lightly with her own, "you with your health and strength and freedom cannot realize all that means to me."

Helen abruptly arose. The tears were starting. Her morning's lesson made her feel very mean in her own eyes. To be thankful for her having nothing to be thankful for; and of asking if life was worth living!

When the sidewalk was reached, Helen turned her moist eyes to her aunt and said abruptly—

"Aunt, don't speak to me! I'll return that thank-offering envelope to-morrow—not empty either; and while there are violets at the florist's and wool in the stores, that dear girl shall not be without either."

And she kept her word.

Mrs. Beecher's Story.

The Great Preacher's Widow is the Wife of "Mr. Beecher as I Knew Him."

It is granted to but few women to be part of such an eventful life as has been that of the wife of Henry Ward Beecher. No man of this century had such a busy life, filled with so many honors and achievements; and to view such a career through the eyes of his life long companion is a pleasure rarely given to a public. Mr. Beecher was a lover of the domestic fireside. "My home is my temple," he once said, and in that home he gathered round him what his nature loved best: birds, flowers, and dainty bits of china and costly gems. If he was great in public life, Mr. Beecher was greater in his home life. In the one capacity he gave himself to the public; in the other he reserved himself to his family. In this latter light he is a new revelation to the public. The articles will cover the entire period of his marriage from their first year of married life, when the couple lived on $300 for twelve months, until the closing of Mr. Beecher's great career. Mrs. Beecher will tell of "Mr. Beecher as I Knew Him," and thousands will gladly listen to her interesting story.

From The Ladies' Home Journal. Love Is Helpful.

I went into one of the largest New York dry goods stores one morning, and while waiting for my change, and finding myself the only customer in that part of the shop, I fell into a little conversation with the girl who had waited on me.

Casually I chanced to remark, "Well, it does not matter so much whether we are on one side of the counter if we are serving the One we love," and, smiling, I added, "The great thing is to be in love. I am in love all the time."

Several young girls, on either side of the one I was talking to, moved up at this remark, and one said, "This is interesting; we must hear this."

"Yes," I said, "the most interesting thing in the world is love; but I was not thinking—when I said I am in love all the time—of the love of the human heart, that may give you ecstasy one hour and anguish the next; but of the One who loves us always and never dies."

Then I touched the little silver cross on my dress and said, "Did you ever hear of the King's Daughters?"

"Oh, yes, indeed," one young girl answered. "There are some in this store." And then I had such a nice sociable talk with the half dozen girls, and told them how often I had felt reproved when shopping to see their patience and cheerfulness.

As I said this bright-looking young girl said, "Do you think that of that?" Generally we are patient and cheerful."

I said: "Yes, indeed, I have seen but rare exceptions."

The girl replied to eagerly, "I am so glad to hear that, for there are so many people who say just the opposite of it."

Oh, how I wish our favored girls who are so often in these great city shops would just think that the same girlish hearts are on the other side of the counter.

I shall never forget the pale faced girl that I met at another time, who wore our little silver cross on her dress, when I said: "Don't you get tired this warm weather standing here?"

The pale cheek flushed with pleasure. "Yes, I do, sometimes, but this week nine beautiful Daughters of the King have talked with me."

I certify that I have prescribed it in hundreds of obstinate cases of Bilious, Intermittent and Remittent Fevers with excellent results. I therefore, from the knowledge of its formula, can conscientiously recommend it to my brother M.D.'s and the public generally. In neuralgia arising from general debility or of malarial origin, "Johnson's Tonic" is a specific. In parturient women who suffer from Malaria, Bilious Fever or general debility, where large doses of quinine or mercury are not admissible, "Johnson's Tonic" can be given with speedy relief and without harmful results.

In delicate stomachs where the taste is objectionable it can be instantly removed by placing a small pinch of salt, sodium chloride in the mouth immediately after taking. THEO. TURNBULL, M. D.
